Aesthetic characteristics

The ample size of this kitchen and its position within the house allow the space available to be optimised using ingenuity and offering good solutions. The entrance hallway has been incorporated into the kitchen to make it more ample, luminous and to give it perspective. The peninsula helps define the perimeter.

This room is an excellent example of integration, where the entrance hall, the kitchen and the dining room come together in perfect harmony without any type of visual separation between them. The result is a diaphanous space that is full of light and very well organised.

Architecture

One of the priorities when planning this kitchen was to concentrate the units on the sidewalls, reserving the area in front of the windows as the entrance space to the house. A space has thus been created that is totally uncluttered and allows people to move comfortably within the kitchen.

The wall unit area is installed next to the wall and is equipped with ovens, fridge and storage units in vertical format that, thanks to their interior equipment, make the most of the space available. The cooking area is equipped with large capacity drawers for storing pots, kitchenware and foodstuffs.

The wall units are reserved for organising the kitchenware. The transparent glass units with horizontal opening make it easier to see what is inside and access the contents.

Highlights

This distribution and the visual warmth this kitchen transmits are its main distinguishing hallmarks. A generous and comfortable space is created that allows for different types of coexistence depending on the owners' moods and needs. Everything is designed to make work easier but also, thanks to a good distribution, to make the space the centre of the home, a meeting place for the family.

To give a sense of unity a uniform range of colours and materials has been used for the whole room.

Functionality and beauty

The world changes and so do people, tastes and needs, but not the wish to make the most of our time. The kitchen is one of the places that occupies most of our time, but also one that can give you more in return. This is why in the kitchen, perhaps more than in any other room, the solution is to find a balance: what is functional is beautiful and what is beautiful is functional.

Unlike other systems, beauty and functionality are both found in the MINOS series: its concealed handle does not decrease storage capacity. To achieve this, we put a profile at the top and a recess in the middle drawer.

Lighting profile

The work space and the correct lighting are aspects that affect the comfort level in a kitchen. In this case, the full potential is gained from both.

The preparation area is equipped with a lighting profile that, apart from providing the light needed for working, has electrical sockets for small electrical appliances and a canal for equipment in which you can place various accessories.

This lighting system has been developed by Santos and is, therefore, an exclusive system.
